

Hidden Treasure

"What are those lights?" asked Kaylee when she saw lights bobbing along the sea shore one night.

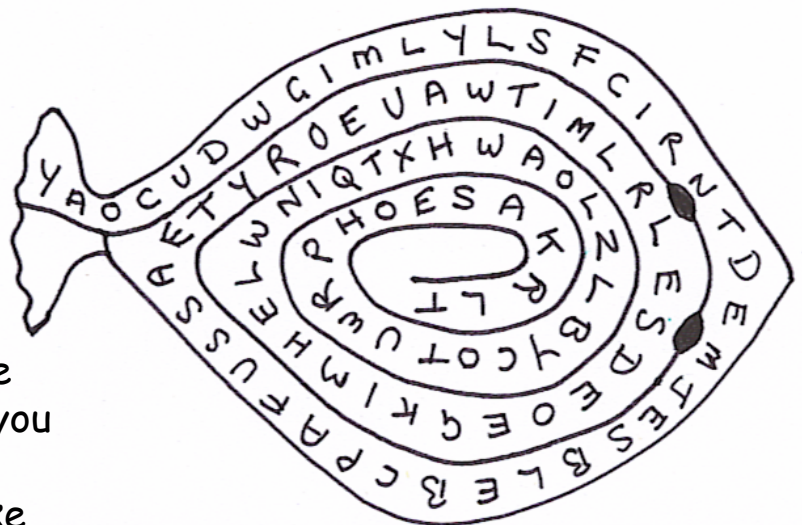

"They're spotlights that people are using to search for flatfish in the shallow water," said dad. "At night these fish, usually flounder, lie half hidden in the sand. Flounder aren't born flat. Their eyes move and their body flattens as they grow until they end up lying on one side with both eyes upwards. Their flat bodies make it hard for anyone to see them lying on the sea bottom. You have to search hard to find them but it's worth it. They are yummy to eat."

Talk to God!

God, we thank you that you are worth searching for and that you are much easier to find than flounder fish. Help us to be like the people in Berea and look for you in your Word, the Bible, everyday.
