

You can't know everything

Dad loves to get talking with other people at camping spots. It's a good way to find out all sorts of interesting things. At Kings Canyon he met a scientist who was studying marsupial moles with geophones. They are like underground microphones the scientists use to listen to the moles movements.

Not much is known about these weird looking creatures. Marsupial moles spend most of the time under the ground burrowing through sand. The soft sand usually falls in behind them so it's like they are swimming through oceans of it. They have no developed eyes or ears, a hard shield-like snout and claws that are shaped like spades. We don't know how far they move, how they find food or how they find each other. We do know they carry their babies in a pouch that faces backwards so the sand doesn't get in to it.

There are many things even the cleverest people in the world know little or nothing about. Only one person knows absolutely everything. That's God.

Listen to God! Ecclesiastes 8:16-17

Talk to God!

Great God, I'm glad you know everything. That means you know all about me and exactly how I'm feeling. And you know all the things I don't know or understand, the things that confuse, puzzle or scare me. Help me to trust in you.

Binara, the nosy frilled neck lizard says, "Can you use the code to find out what 1 John 3: 20 say about God?"
